What's New

Next week it is World Book Day and we will be having a whole school activity day based around the book 'The Mysteries of Harris Burdick' by Chris Van Allsburg. Rather than dressing as a favourite character, we would like the children to come dressed ready to be detectives or investigators to work together to try and solve the mysteries within the story and other puzzles we will have created around the school. This will hopefully lead on to some very imaginative ideas and creative writing from the older children and story ideas from the younger children.

A note from Mrs Crawforth

"I am so happy to share the news that Emma and her husband have had a baby boy, Henry Thomas Goldstraw, born on Saturday weighing 7lb 1 oz. Mum and baby are doing well and we wish the new family all the best."

Mrs Frost is hoping to return to work next week but will be doing a phased return with only short sessions to begin with. She is making good progress but still has a lot of pain and discomfort when sitting. Any Parent Pay issues that don't get sorted this week will hopefully be sorted when she returns. Thanks for your patience."

This is in addition to Purple Mash that children also have a log in to.

Other news:

Comic relief this year is on Friday 15th March. Along with other fun and activities, we will be having a talent show. This will be very informal with children performing in front of their friends. Please talk to your children about the talents they have and help them to decide what they might like to do. We ask that children bring a £2 donation for Comic relief please.

Could you please not use the school mobile number to communicate with school as we do not always have the phone available for checking unless we have text you first and have asked for a response. If you need to let us know about anything such as illness or medical appointments, please can you leave a message on the school answer phone as this will be picked up frequently throughout the day. Thank you.
